THE END.

CORRIGENDA & ADDENDA.

TO THE READER.

THE length of the following catalogue of "Corrigenda & Addenda," has been occasioned by the novelty and extent of the undertaking, as well as by the great mass of matter contained in these closely printed volumes. Those who are well acquainted with the difficulties of arranging and reducing to proper order the acts of parliament on any single subject of jurisprudence possessing the least importance, will be little surprised that errors have occurred in a work which contains an arranged, reduced, and consolidated view of the Statute Law, on the many and various heads to be found in the List of Titles prefixed to the first volume. It has been the source of infinite regret to the Editors to find that the minute accuracy which they so anxiously endeavoured to attain, and of the full value of which they are too well aware, has thus eluded their utmost efforts; but they have taken care to amend in the INDEX every error they have discovered in the DIGEST, and in many instances occurring both in the Index and list of Corrigenda, &c. have made considerable ADDITIONS to its text. The very full references given in the following list, will enable the reader to make the requisite corrections in the margin of the Digest, or at least to consult the Editors' last corrections where he has the least doubt. The whole is now commended to the indulgence of the Profession.
